Hello, this is Janice. Thank you for contacting the call center at the center of the universe. Your life and the Universe itself have no meaning.

I see you noted that you wake up, work, watch Netflix, sleep, repeat. But you think there has to be some real purpose to your life.

Here are our three options for dealing with existential crisis.

Our basic plan is Nihilism option. Since your life and the universe itself have no purpose, you can simply not care and reject societal norms and embrace ennui!

But let me go over our second option as I'm sure you don't want to be a fucking wackadoo! Since your life and the universe itself have no purpose, with our Existentialism option, you get to make your own meaning, as you have free will!

Please note, you will need to embrace the fact that you will be truly alone. Until you die. So, I think our third option is just the thing for you, cause that sounds super lonely and depressing.

With our Absurdism package, you accept and reject that your life and the universe itself have no purpose by embracing that very fact.

It's weird, your life and the universe itself have no purpose, but you have this burning desire to understand it all. Silly humans.

This option allows you to say "fuck off universe, I'm going to live this life anyway"!

Here are some hashtag protips to use Absurdity. Take a walk in the woods. Take up the banjo. Make a tea for your grandmother, and have a nice chat with her.

Simply enjoy the people and things around you, to the best you can, before the universe eventually rips it all away with its cold, uncaring, ever-expanding hands! Isn't that nice?

I've singed you up, and you'll receive a confirmation email and a satisfaction survey shortly. I'll need your credit card, social security number, and banking info.
